There are no striking incidents in his life, which was one of unceasing labor. In 1530 he went to Bologna, where he met Charles V., who created him Count Palatine and Knight of the Golden Spur, by letters patent, bestowed many high privileges on him, and, both then and afterward, sat to him for his portrait. Taken in their totality, Titian's pictures fairly entitle him to be called the greatest of all painters.

The Chariot Race

JEAN LEON GÉRÔME, Paris

PARIS, March 14, 1876.

6 RUE DE BRUXELLES.

DEAR MR. STEWART:

My picture, "The Chariot Race," having been sent you two or three days ago, I will add a few words on the subject.

The scene occurs in the "Circus Maximus," the grandest monument of Rome, which is situated at the foot of the Palatine Hill, in such fashion as that all the structures erected on the hill were contiguous to the Circus, thus giving a picturesque and imposing aspect to the whole.

The rectangular edifice at nearly the center of the picture is the "Septizonium," a seven-story building, as its name indicates ; the object of which has never been known. There was another story in the time of Pope Sixtus V., and during that era there was an engraving made of it, which we now possess, and which is of very great service in the restoration of the building.

In the upper part are the surrounding walls of the Palace of the Cæsars ; a little further to the left is the residence of Augustus and the theater of that Emperor. From there, by a subterranean passage, he was able to reach his box, where the statue of Rome was located.

This restoration has been made in accordance with a plan of Ancient Rome, which was engraved on the stone pavement of a temple, and which has been conveyed to the Capitol ; accordingly, there is an absolute fidelity both as to the location of the different monuments, and also, which is equally important, in regard to the dimensions, for it must be understood that the Circus would hold 150,000 spectators.

The Romans were passionately fond of the races ; and the Circus had become just as much of a necessity to the multitude as food. One might well inscribe on this picture, as its epigraph, the verses of Horace :

"There are who joy them in the Olympic strife
And love the dust they gather in the course ;
The goal by hot wheels shunn'd, the famous prize,
Exalt them to the gods that rule mankind."

These, my dear sir, are the details as concisely as I can give them, to which I add the assurances of my cordial regard and best wishes.

Thusnelda at the Triumphal Entry of Germanicus into Rome

78 x 54

KARL THEODOR VON PILOTY, . Munich

Painted to order for the late A. T. Stewart, Esq. At the request of Emperor William was exhibited in Berlin before being sent to this country. The large painting now in the Munich Gallery was painted subsequent to the above.

The following description is by the painter, Piloty :

The Emperor Tiberius, surrounded by his Courtiers (Favorites, Councilors, Lictors, Senators, and Roman Women), has taken his place upon a tribune under a spread canopy, in order that the triumphal procession of Germanicus may pass before him.

Germanicus appears in the background upon a triumphal car, accompanied by his five sons, surrounded by Trophies of Victory, and is greeted by the applause and acclamations of the people who are to be seen at the Arch of Triumph.

In front of the car, reaching from the middle distance to the foreground of the picture, are the German Captives being led in chains. As principal figure of this group and of the picture walks Thusnelda, in the costume of the Germans, with her son Tumelicus (a child of three years), accompanied by nurse and an attendant. Before her is the Priest Libes, coupled (chained) together with Warriors, escorted by Roman Soldiers, who insult them. Behind Thusnelda are to be seen her brothers, leaders of the Cherusker, chained together, with bears, etc., etc. The foreground to the left is occupied by populace of Rome, who mock and insult Thusnelda.

Thusnelda, having been forcibly carried away from her husband Arminius, a German Prince, by her father, Segest, was, from reasons which appeared to him advantageous for his own personal interest and the condition of the Germans, betrayed and delivered into the hands of the Romans.

In the picture Tiberius has selected Segest to stand before the steps of his throne, from where he is forced to witness the shame of his own daughter; he is mocked by the Senators sitting near him, as they point to the prisoners below.

Strabo describes, as an eye-witness, this event; he, as well as Tacitus, although Romans, express plainly their sympathy for the devotion and love of country exhibited by Thusnelda, whose personality will ever be a subject of poetical matter for an artist.

The inclosed Photograph is a reproduction of the first hasty sketch made for the picture. (This Photograph will be presented to the purchaser of Painting.)

DEAR SIR: I will not send any pictures to the Philadelphia Centennial, and I would be very glad to be represented at this exhibition by the two pictures you have by me, "The White Mountains," and the "Niagara," as I consider them my two most important works. I should be very much obliged to you if you would make at once the proper application. . . .

A. T. STEWART, ESQ.

NEW YORK, February 27, 1863.

DEAR SIR : The portrait of Alexander von Humboldt this day delivered to you was purchased by me in fall of 1858, when partly finished, the head and hand and drapery being at the time complete, but the background remained unfinished until 1859. The illustrious subject of the painting died on the 6th of May, 1859, at which time the picture was at the foot of his bed. . . .

The picture was received in New York in summer of 1859, and has ever since remained in my possession and has never been copied. The certificate of the artist which accompanies this letter speaks for itself. . . .

Yours truly, WM. AUFERMANN.

CERTIFICATE OF ARTIST.

I, the undersigned, hereby certify that the Oil Painting representing ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT, which was sold and sent to Mr. W. Aufermann to New York, was painted by me from life.

PORTICI, October 9, 1874.

TO MONS. THE BARON DAVILLIER.

MY VERY DEAR FRIEND: I regret much to learn that you have been suffering, and that I have not been in Paris to keep you company, for if lacking wit to amuse you, I could at least distract you, by prattling about old curiosities. On the subject of my works, I will speak only of my picture, which is 1 meter 37 centimeters long by 0^m 72 high. There are a good many figures, and I don't exactly know what to call it, as it is in some degree an epitome of my summer's life. Could I not call it Villégiature—"Country Life"? In fact, there are women on the grass, bathers who are taking headers into the waves, the ruins of an old castle, the walls of a garden, the entrance into a village, etc., etc., all that in bright sunlight, not a single ray omitted; everything is fair and gay, and how could it be otherwise since we have so happily passed our summer? My picture is not yet finished; it wants a month's work yet.

Your Friend,

FORTUNY.

JEAN LOUIS ERNEST MEISSONIER, Paris

CORRESPONDENCE IN RELATION TO MEISSONIER'S GREAT PICTURE,
"FRIEDLAND, 1807."

MY DEAR MR. STEWART:

I have delayed writing you because my letter must be a last adieu to a work of many years—an act of final separation.

You will comprehend why I wished to do so only at the last moment; as, however great may be my satisfaction to know you are to be its possessor, I can only part with it with pain—a picture which has been for so long a time the life and joy of my studio.

Le voila, that which will soon be in your possession, be good enough to receive as a friend; not as one that pleases at the first contact, and is then soon forgotten, but as one of those who, by intimate acquaintance, is loved more and more. Permit me to believe that when you are looking at this picture—on which I have bestowed all the science and experience I have been able to acquire in my art—your pleasure will constantly grow greater.

I have the conviction—which I do not express without a certain pride—that the value of this work will increase with time. What may or can be said of it will pass away, but the picture will remain, to be an honor to both of us; and although it can defend itself, yet, among the thousands of persons who have hastened to see it, many have done it injustice with a certain malevolent appreciation—still I have the right, having painted it with so much sincerity of purpose, to defend and explain it. Strange as this may appear, it must be done; because, however singular may be the fact, some, I understand, have not been pleased to go and see it for themselves, but have adopted the unfair judgment of others.

I did not intend to paint a Battle—I wanted to paint Napoleon at the zenith of his glory; I wanted to paint the love, the adoration of the soldiers for the great Captain in whom they had faith, and for whom they were ready to die.

I previously had represented, in the picture "1814," the heartrending end of the Imperial Dream—those men, only recently intoxicated with glory, now shown exhausted, and no longer believing in their invincible chief. My palette then did not have colors sad enough for the purpose—but today, in "Friedland, 1807," wishing everything to appear brilliant at this triumphant moment, it seemed to me I was unable to find colors sufficiently dazzling. No shade should be upon the Imperial face, to take from him the epic character I wished to give him. The battle, already commenced, was necessary to add to the enthusiasm of the soldiers, and make the subject stand forth, but not to diminish it by saddening details. All such shadows I avoided, and presented nothing but a dismounted cannon and some growing wheat which would never ripen. This was enough.

The men and the Emperor are in the presence of each other. The soldiers cry to him that they are his, and the impassive Chief, whose Imperial will directs the masses that move around him, salutes his devoted army. He and they plainly comprehend each other, and absolute confidence is expressed in every face.

Such was the idea as it leaped from my brain at the first instant when I embodied the picture in thought; and which, in spite of the long time I have taken to put it on canvas, has always remained with me so clear and plain that I have never in any manner modified it.

As to the execution, only a painter (and one of great experience) can say what time, labor, and patience have been brought to bear upon this work to produce a single whole out of so many diverse elements. Only he can say how difficult it is, from such varied materials, to put aside all those artifices which so often are used in art to cover defects. The growing wheat is even proof of the difficulties I have encountered in covering it with the dust which hides so many things.

I said to you, at the beginning, and again let me repeat it, that I have faith in my work. Time will consolidate and strengthen it more and more, and I am also certain your enlightened love for art will protect it, in case there should be need.

Now, dear sir, let me close by offering you my portrait. You desired to have one, and I have had the pleasure of painting it for you myself. With it I trust you will speak of me more intimately, and will always be enabled to recall how much I am

Your devoted E. MEISSONIER.

POISSY, January 27, 1876.

NEW YORK, February 18, 1876.

MY DEAR MR. MEISSONIER:

It gives me pleasure to acknowledge the safe arrival of your superb picture, "Friedland, 1807," also your valued letter, with the portrait, as a souvenir of regard; which I shall always cherish and prize as coming "from my friend Meissonier."

The grand painting each day develops such additional beauty and interest that I am constantly deriving new enjoyments from its possession.

As you remark, the period of the picture, and the battle it recalls, represent the height of Napoleon's Imperial greatness, when confidence in his destiny was entertained not only by the French people, but by himself. The excitement of the troopers, and the calm face of the Emperor, surrounded by his Marshals, equally calm, and never dreaming of defeat, are all faithfully shown by you.

The beholder cannot but feel thrilled with the emotion and excitement the picture so faithfully illustrates, and the memory involuntarily reverts to a period when certainly the glory of France was at its zenith, and when the confidence of the Emperor in his future was at its highest elevation.

The labor and care, on your part, which the painting exhibits are remarked by all; and I may add that the work is one upon which you may rest your fame with perfect confidence.

Accept my sincere thanks for the fidelity with which you have completed this great work, and especially accept my thanks for the souvenir of your portrait which accompanied it.

Sincerely your friend,

ALEX. T. STEWART.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PAINTING.

"The painting tells its own story so completely and simply that it will be sufficient to indicate its principal points. In the center, the States of the Union are personified by beautiful maidens, grouped around two hand-in-hand figures, stately and noble, which represent the American Government. One, in a white and flowing robe, is the Republic; the other is Minerva, so long associated with wisdom, poetry, art, science, the manufactures of domestic life, and, above all, with the maintenance of peace, the basis of true national prosperity. They stand, graceful in their strength, on a triumphal car, drawn by lions, representing the solidity and sovereignty of the American Republic. The motto E Pluribus Unum, which tells the national history, is inscribed upon the car. In the distance the statue of the Father of his Country, first in peace as in war, is visible; grateful and loving citizens, who surround it, are bringing wreaths of laurel, to place on the pedestal suitable offerings of remembrance and affection. The winged messengers of eternal Fame linger in their heavenly flight, to proclaim to earth, air, and ocean the glory and might of the successful Republic, and to invite the nations to behold it.

"In the near center are the beautiful representatives of the States of the Union—the first thirteen which adopted the Declaration of Independence properly having the most prominent places before the car of triumph. Here there is no distinction of North and South. They fought, in the great contest which created the nation, side by side, as they are here represented. Between the great States of New York and Pennsylvania stands fair Virginia, and, on the other side, Massachusetts is posed between Louisiana and South Carolina, others being visible in the background.

"The accessories are various and expressive. Here, the Indian representatives of the aborigines of the great continent, "the stoic of the woods, the man without a tear," regard the wondrous scene with silent amazement and admiration; there, the colored race rejoice in their liberation; over on the opposite side, in fair contrast, while the sun is rising on the consummation of the great Centennial, vessels of many nations are bearing hosts of emigrants to the land of freedom, where Industry, Enterprise, Education, with equal laws and full religious toleration, unite to present, as in a visible vista, equality, wealth, and assured social position.

"The arts and sciences are represented by the implements of manufacture, mechanics, the arts, and literature, while fruits and flowers are the symbols of the earth's abundance; and, to complete the picture, one of our noblest rivers quenches the torch of War, and the spirits of the immortal founders of the Republic ascend to join in the Great Centennial. The canvas on which all of this is drawn is 22 by 35 feet, making, undoubtedly, the largest and most complete allegorical picture ever exhibited on this side of the Atlantic.

"The picture was painted upon an order of the late Alexander T. Stewart, and was intended for the easterly end of his gallery. Proving too large for the space, it was not used, and when the Grand Union Hotel ball-room was designed, the plan adopted included a panel to receive this work."

Mlle. MARIE ROSA BONHEUR, . Paris

"Masterpiece of the artist, Salon, 1853; sold to Gambart & Co., London, and exhibited in that city and in Manchester in 1856. Purchased in 1857 by Mr. Wm. P. Wright, of Weehawken, New Jersey, and exhibited in New York city in October of that year; thence passed to Mr. A. T. Stewart; engraved when in Gambart's possession by Thomas Landseer, for whose use the artist painted a reduced copy, with some changes in details. This copy passed to Jacob Bell, who bequeathed it, in 1859, to the National Gallery, London. Mlle. Bonheur, preferring to be represented by a better work, painted a third Horse Fair, which she offered to the National Gallery in place of the hastily executed sketch bequeathed by Mr. Bell, but the trustees deciding that they had no power to make the exchange, she contented herself with retouching the Bell picture."—Cyclopedia of Painters and Paintings, New York, 1886.
